

Information Sheet for Direct Observations (16+)

My name is: _____

Today's date: _____

I am a student on the Social Work qualifying programme at Cardiff University. As part of my studies, I need to complete three assessed placements in social work settings. To pass these placements, I must compile a portfolio of evidence to show how I meet the National Occupational Standards for Social Work and uphold the Code of Professional Practice for Social Care.

What is a direct observation?

A direct observation is when a qualified social worker watches me as I carry out a piece of work with a person or family. This might include a home visit, a meeting in the office, or a Teams call. The purpose is to provide me with feedback and support my development as a student social worker.

Why am I sharing this with you?

I would like to be observed while I am working with you. This is completely your choice. If you decide not to take part, this will not affect the service you receive from the Local Authority or any other organisation in any way.

If you agree:

- You can change your mind at any time, before or during the session, without giving a reason.
- Your name and personal details will not be included in my portfolio or university work.
- After the session, the person observing me may ask you for feedback about how you feel the session went. You do not have to give feedback if you don't want to.

What happens next?

If you're happy to go ahead, you will be asked to sign a consent form.
